

Zoo Animals Predict Earthquake

The D.C. Zoo said that on Wednesday almost a whole week before the earthquake on Tuesday many of its animals were behaving oddly. The day of the earthquake animals were seen abandoning their food and climbing the trees.

I hypothesize that if we were to observe animal behavior we would not have to rely on the technology of today the animals could help us get to safer ground when a natural disaster is going to happen.

The question that I still have is, do house pets also have this sense or is it only animals that live in the wild.
